For its traditional full-length conference, held every other year, The HSUS turns the spotlight on four facets of the society's extended activities, the National Association for Humane and Environmental Education (NAHEE), the Center for Respect of Life and Environment (CRLE), Humane Society International (HSI), and EarthKind. Through the preconference symposium and then, with nationally recognized artist and lecturer Amy Freeman Lee.

serving as our moderator, we will learn how these affiliated organizations enlarge and extend the mission and objectives of The HSUS.

The Hon. Bruce Babbitt, president of the League of Conservation Voters and former governor of Arizona, will deliver the keynote address. Not to be missed are two special presentations, a moving interpretation of the life of Rachel Carson by actress Kaiulani Lee and “Aiding the Silent Victims of the Gulf War,” narrated by John C. Walsh of the World Society for the Protection of Animals.

In addition to members of the staffs of all the organizations, workshops will feature Susanne Hetts (Denver Dumb Friends League), Steve Johnson (Native Ecosystems), Kathryn Bucher (Miller and Chevalier), Fred Kirschenmann (Organic Food Producers Association of North America), Jay Kirkpatrick (Eastern Montana College), Russ Reidinger (USDA/APHIS), Tony Povilitis (Lifenet), and wildlife photographer Dick Randall.

The James Herriot Award and Joseph Wood Krutch Medal will be presented to Father Thomas Berry and John C. Walsh, respectively, both of whom have distinguished themselves in furthering the protection of animals and the Earth.

Take this opportunity to examine the detailed program on these pages.

We think you will decide that, for four days in October, all roads should lead to Colorado.
