

ON THE IPAD: View more of our editors' favorite submissions.

Once a year, my husband and I visit Farm Sanctuary in Watkins Glen, New York. The sanctuary is home to all kinds of rescued farm animals, from pigs and cows to turkeys, chickens, goats, sheep and rabbits. It's in a beautiful secluded area up on a hill. Sanctuary staff tell you about each animal's background and personality on guided tours, and they know each animal by name. Afterward, you can walk around certain areas.

The beautiful girl in this photo is Honey. She'd been pointed out to us during the tour, but we couldn't see her because she was lying in the daisies. As we walked around later, I spotted her at the top of the meadow poking her head curiously above the flowers. I called her name and she barreled toward me, so close that one of my pictures shows only her ear and snout. This is such a joyful photo—here she is basking in the sunshine and enjoying the freedom to be herself. But I couldn't help but realize she's one of the lucky ones. I stood there for a long time talking to her. She had such a beautiful, trusting smile.

— BONNY DUNHAM, FAIRPORT, NEW YORK

SUBMIT YOUR SHOT

Do you have an inspiring photo of a favorite pet, wild animal or rescued farm animal? Send it to us for possible publication in All Animals or at humanesociety.org/allanimals, along with an explanation of 250 words or fewer about why it's meaningful to you. Photos should be at least 300 dpi at a size of 8-by-10" and at least 2 MB.

To upload your photo and information, visit humanesociety.org/yourbestshot. Send hard copy submissions to All Animals—Your Best Shot, The HSUS, 2100 L St., N.W., Washington, DC 20037. (Hard copies cannot be returned.)